INTRODUCTION

The War of 1812 began with the United States declaration of war against Great Britain on June 18, 1812 and ended with the ratification of the treaty of Ghent on February 17, 1815. The lack of adequate communication at the start of the war was a significant cause of early American defeats in the West. The American forces in northern Ohio had been poised for an invasion of Canada but notice of the declaration of war was sent to General Hull by regular United States mail and did not reach him until July 2, 1812. In the interim his counterpart, Sir George Prevost, received his information on June 27, 1812. In an effort to solve these communication difficulties, several special methods and routes for mail handling were developed. The high cost of the war led to a tax on postal charges, the first ever instituted. These 1815 war surcharge rates were in effect for only thirteen months. For a further discussion of these postal rates see my article in The Chronicle, August 1983, or request a copy. The 1799 rates were restored in April, 1816 for a one month period, the briefest period of existence for any U.S. postal rates. The laws governing the free mail privilege were also altered in 1815.

The collection offered here illustrates the range of exceptional mail routes that were developed during the period, the postal rates whose passage was mandated by the costs of the war, the April 1816 restored rates, and the free mail system in effect. The 1812 to 1816 period saw the introduction of the first public express mail, the first mail contract steamboat service, and the first mail contract service on a canal. The military mail scheme included special arrangements to handle mails in occupied Canada and East Florida. Postal expansion, begun as a war necessity, resulted in a vastly improved communication system in the West. The British blockade, although relatively ineffective, prompted the use of neutral vessels, naval vessels, and cartel ships (flag of truce ships carrying prisoners) for carriage of ocean mails during the war. With peace, ocean commerce and correspondence by conventional routes reached new levels.

The War of 1812 was a war of many ironies. War was declared by the United States, ostensibly over the issue of impressment, after the British had revoked their Orders In Council, which Madison had objected to so vigorously. A relatively large American military force was often defeated in the West, while their very small naval force was victorious against the largest navy in the world. The Battle of New Orleans, which is the single engagement most often remembered, was fought after the treaty of peace had been signed. Communication, or the lack thereof, was an important factor in virtually every phase of the war.

The collection was recently exhibited at the ARIPEX '89 show in Tucson, Arizona where it was awarded the reserve grant.

Condition

Condition grades mentioned in the description refer to overall appearance of the item. On covers bearing adhesives, expect normal average centering or margins for the particular issue, only when adhesive condition is above the normal will it be specifically described. File folds on folded letters that do not detract from appearance are not mentioned, nor are missing back flaps on covers if no postal markings are affected.

fine—averages appearance for period, markings readable about fine—somewhat below average, markings partially readable

MANUSCRIPTS

WAR DECLARED

War was declared by the United States on June 18, 1812. At that time John Rodgers commanded the home squadron. Three day after receipt of the following letter Rodgers sailed, on board the Frigate President, to intercept the British West India fleet. He engaged the Belvidera on June 23, 1812 and personally fired the first shot of the war. Rodgers was wounded in the engagement.

- 1 Paul Hamilton, Secretary of the Navy, highly important A.L.S., 1p, 4 to, Navy Department, June 18, 1812, to Commodore John Rodgers at New York, with integral free franked address leaf

“Sir,

I apprise you that war has this days been declared between ‘The United Empire Of Great Britain and Ireland & their dependencies’ and the United States of America. You are to consider the vessels under your command as entitled to every belligerent right, as well of attack or defence. For the present, it is desirable that with the force under your command, you remain in such position as to enable you most conveniently to receive further more extensive, and more particular orders, which will be conveyed to you through New York; but as it is understood that there are one or more British Cruisers on the Coast, in the vicinity of Sandy Hook, you are at your descretion, free to attack them-returning immediately after into Port -You are free to capture or destroy them. Extend these orders to Com. Decatur.”

"I avail myself of the opportunity of a Boat going on shore to acquaint you with our situation. We have had a tolerably pleasant time and two or three days since had the satisfaction to fall in with the Algerian Admirall and capture him after his receiving more or less of the fire of three fourths of our Squadron. I first gave her 4 broad sides in which I killed her Admiral, then the Commodore having reached between her and myself, compelled me to cease, when he began. He gave her a few shots, went ahead, dropped under his Lee and re-commenced at close quarters while the small fire was on his quarter doing there little damage. The only position I would now take was to run across his Bow which I did while the Commodore was under his Lee. I got part of a broadside into his stern. When he struck, we killed the Admiral. The 2nd or 3rd shot. We are now expecting the rest of the Squadron every day.

I wrote Worrell the other day from Gibraltar and will soon write again. Be so good as to send him or my brother this. Lt. Hindman is well and gives his Love to his friends. He is admirably calculated for the service and has not even been sick. Mention me very favorably to our friends, but do not publish my letters, as your will find the Commodore takes the capture to his ship."

"I arrived here this morning and found the question of War had finally been settled yesterday, so that you will immediately be at Sea if you are not already there. That you will very soon have an opportunity of signaling your colors there can be no doubt, and that you will improve those opportunities in such a manner as to reflect high honor on yourselves and our country's flag....I called at the office this morning and was very near being obliged to retire in a more private path, but at last was so successful as to procure the suspension of my orders to join the Constitution, but I do not know what employment they will give me. I shall wait here some few days in hope of meeting some that will be satisfactory....

May you soon have a plentiful harvest of laurels and prize money, and live long enough to transmit them both to your posterity. Compliments to the Commodore and all friends."

U.S. OCCUPATION OF SPANISH EAST FLORIDA

The U.S. Government, in an attempt to acquire Spanish East Florida, encouraged and supported an American led rebellion. A base was established at St. Mary’s, Georgia and on March 13, 1812 a force of approximately 80 Georgians and Floridians, led by Lt. Col. Thomas Adam Smith, who believed they would be supported by the U.S. Navy, crossed the border into Florida and formed a short lived “Territory of East Florida.” It soon became apparent that the chances for success were slim and the U.S. Government disavowed the rebels.

I was in a dungeon in the Fort of Augustine without anything to sleep on but a board six feet long & 9½ inches wide the floor muddy and the dripping wet and owing to some error of judgement of Genl. Matthews or of his too great zeal, I was deceived by him and led to believe that I should with the other volunteers be supported by the U.S. nor did I ever know to the contrary until I was liberated by the humanity of the Spanish Governor. During the time above mentioned myself and one more was fed on parseley and bearies (?) lights boiled together and a reason never come to our faces nor did we ever see the light of the sun in the time except when the door was opened to hand in a piggin of victuals....I am quite at my ease since I returned home and the manner more my friends sent a petition for my relief but I met it on my way home being liberated by the Governor for reasons unknown while the other prisoners were retained but I can inform you that there was some tokens (ed. note, masonic) passed from me and answered by his Excellency and my liberation followed without one word ever being exchanged on the subject. THE RIVER RAISIN MASSACRE

In January, 1813 General William H. Harrison advanced through Ohio toward Detroit in an attempt to re-take the city. On January 21, 1813 General Winchester, with a force of 960 men, camped just below Frenchtown, on the River Raisin. At dawn the next day he was attacked by Colonel Proctor with a force of 500 Whites and 600 Indians. The unsuspecting Americans were massacred with 397 men killed and over 500 taken prisoner including General Winchester. General Harrison, fearful that Colonel Proctor would press after his victory, regrouped his forces at Ft. Winchester while Colonel Proctor returned to his stronghold at Malden. Many of the American prisoners and wounded from Frenchtown were slaughtered after the battle by their Indian guards and the "River Raisin Massacre" became the watchword for American revenge.

- 25 River Raisin Massacre, pair of folded letters from John McCalla to Lexington, Kentucky, the first, dated French Town, River Raisin (Michigan Territory), January 21, 1813

"Return thanks, with me for my life preserved. I have at length been in an action, on the 18th, the place where I longed to be. I have seen the enemy and have seen him defeated. I have seen my fellow soldiers extended lifeless bloody corpses on the ground, and many others crying in agony from dangerous wounds. I have heard balls whistling as thick as the pattering hail, around me and yet not touched, even in my clothes I wondered that I should escape, and expected every ball would be for me. It was not very often that I had time for thoughts as I acted as Adjutant, and was almost continually in a gallop from one column to another. I can only say of the engagement, that our movements were continually advancing, generally in a run. Once the right wing halted for a movement of the left, but only a short time. Our situation at present is an enviable one, compared to our past...(lists losses)...The loss is trifling when compared with that of the enemy. The French who live on the road through which they retreated, say they counted from 50 to 55 dead ones, and that there were nearly 150 wounded..."

with ms "Cincinnati 9 Feby 1813" pmk and "12½" rate, the second, now as a paroled prisoner, dated Fort Niagara, Feby 10, 1813

"I hasten to relieve your minds from all anxiety as to my safety and situation. I am again on the United States territory after 18 days spent in captivity. You know but little I suppose of the particulars of (the battle) in which we suffered so severely. We (were) attacked in our camp at daybreak on the 22nd Jany. by the British and Indians. We contained the action until ½ past 10 o'clock when we received an order from Genl. Winchester, then in the power of the Enemy, to surrender at discretion. At that time our ammunition was nearly expended, 200 or more of our men cut off by the Savages after their unfortunate retreat, and our beloved Colonel taken with our General. Our party in the picketed gardens did not loose but 5 men killed and about 20 wounded. In order to save their lives we agreed to surrender. So the wounded could be conveyed more easily. The day after we left there, the wounded, then in the power of the Indians, were all massacred, except those who were able to walk. Between 20 & 40 fell victims to this unheard of cruelty...(continues with partial list of those killed)..I shall start from this as soon as possible."

"By Leut. Ross you will receive news that will call to action every sympathy of your Lord. The flower of Kentucky at the head of the left wing of the N.W. Army is no more, he will tell you more than I can write. I have recieved orders to march to Fort Winchester with three of the remaining Companies of my Regiment, you will I expect also receive orders to march to the same point. I would suggest to you the propriety of transporting your baggage by water and if you think practicable drop down as many empty canoes as will take on the loading that is in the sleds between your post and this. The loading can get on no how else and will be of great advantage to the Army. I wish you, to immediately on the receipt of this to dispatch an express to me how and when your troops will start to this place and if shortly I will remain here and we will march together. I wish to hear from you as quick as possible."

U.S. OCCUPATION OF CANADA

On September 26, 1813 the American recaptured Detroit, which had been held since the River Raisin Massacre. The americans pursued Genl. Proctor through Sandwich, Canada which was taken September 29th. The campaign culminated with the defeat of Proctor and his Indian alies on October 4, 1813.

- 28 Sandwich U. Canada endorsement and Express on 3¼p, A.L.S. of Adj. Genl. John O'Fallon to Louisville, Ky, letter dated "Head Quarters Sandwich, 1 October 1813" describes the re-occupation of Detroit and occupation of Sandwich reads:

"Our army reached this place about 2 o'clock P.M. on the 29th ultimo and on that evening the Genl. crossed the River with twelve hundred men and possessed himself of Detroit. The inhabitants stripped of their all, their only resource being upon the sucess of this army, seeing which decided, so soon as our boats touched their shore displayed an American Flag which had been kept concealed and hailed us with a burst of rejoicing perhaps never before equaled. It was unquestionably a most opportune relief, but for which, on that night it is the prevailing opinion that all would have been lost without them, as the Indians, which were to the number of between 3 and 400 collected in the vicinity of the town could not have been another night longer restrained from burning the town and committing an indiscriminate massacre. The inhabitants highly apprehensive of this had sent messengers to the Genl. urging of him immediate relief.

Genl. Proctor left this on the 27th ult. with about 500 regulars and considerable Indian force. The latter having been much diminished by the disposition of many of them to sue for Peace. The General received yesterday a deputation from the Ottawa Indians in behalf of themselves and others to return to a good understanding with the U.S. upon any terms. Upon the united request of the citizens of Detroit in their behalf I am convinced that the Genl. will prescribe the conditions that will restore tranquility between them and us and ensure the safety of the Michigan Territory from further depredations from them or those that will continue hostile.

Col. Johnson's Regt (see lot #30) of one thousand strong arrived at Detroit last night and are now crossing so soon as which is effected, the whole army (except what will be left at Detroit) will resume the pursuit of the enemy. The point on the River French it is said they intend making a stand is upwards of sixty miles from this. With the assistance of the mounted men, if we fail in overtaking Genl. Proctor we can't but intercept his baggage etc. transported by land and water.

The inhabitants of this part of upper Canada have been somewhat oppressed by the Indians. That all seem to conceive the conquest of their Country as a blessing to them."

OCEAN WATERWAY

BOTTLE LETTER

During the early 1800’s the British Navy lost many sailors to desertion. Many of these sailors left their ships to gain employment with American merchant vessels at substantially higher pay. In order to re-capture deserters, British naval officers routinely boarded American vessels and pressed sailors into service. If American citizenship could be proved the sailors were released. This practice of impressment was particularly loathesome to Americans and was one of the contributing causes to the War of 1812.

- 38 Bottle Letter, an incredible letter thrown overboard in a bottle, from an American impressed into the British Navy in 1806, it was found on shore and sent under cover from the Collector in Baltimore to David Gelston in New York, the bottle letter reads:

“Lat 10. Long 74 on Board the Pethel Sloop of War. I am American Born at Boston aged 26 years. Sailed from New York on Board the Brig Lyon Nov 26, 1805. Nothing Occured worthy of Remark for 14 days after We lost sight of the Hook when at 6 o’clock in the Evening we was brought to by the above Vesel and after undergoing many Species of Insult myself & three others mainly Frederick Fenton, Simon Alongos & Aaron Stusio, all native Americans were ordered on board which we refused & on so doing was beaten & Kicked into the Boat, was then thrown into Irons for ten days, after which time was brought on Deck & Interrogated if we would enter in his Majesties Service with the Alternative of a good flogging and to live on bread and Water untill we should comply with their Imperious mandates, after a short Consultation amongst us we agreed to enter & Embrace the first Opportunity that Occured to free us from the Slavery in which we was involved. Accordingly we Signified our Willingness to become the Tools of the Navy of his Britannic Majesty. /Tis Impossible to say any more as my watch on Deck is called. I must therefore conclude hoping that some Effectual mode of Redressing the grievances of American Tars will be thought of & put into Execution by our Govt./John Johnston/Jany. 10, 1806.”

the covering letter with red “Balt^e Md Jun 9” pmk and ms “34” (17x2) rate reads:

“Sir,

The enclosed letter was handed to me this morning by William Jennett, Master of a Coasting vessel, who found (it) corked up in a Bottle on Shore, the State of North Carolina.

As the writer, as well as the other sufferers, who were impressed with him, sailed from your Port in the Month of November last, in the Brig Lion, I hope you may have it in your power to furnish the necessary proofs for their relief.”

HUDSON RIVER MAILS

The period of Ship mail usages on the Hudson River extended until April 15, 1815. A Post Office Circular of March 21, 1815 (item #192) announced the letting of the contracts for carriage of contract mails by steamboat. The contract was awarded to The North River Steamboat Company (The Fulton Line) and on April 15, 1815 contract mail service by steamers between Albany and New York City commenced. Loose letters carried up the Hudson, which entered the mails at Albany, received the manuscript "B" notation and were rated the same as if carried in the regular contract mails.

1815 WAR SURCHARGE RATES

By an act of Congress, passed December 23, 1814 the postal rates then in effect (the 1799 rates) were to be increased by 50%. This surtax was an indirect taxation to help defray the cost of the War of 1812 and was part of a larger tax scheme proposed and implemented by Alexander J. Dallas, the Secretary of the Treasury. It was the first time that postal charges were used as a way of increasing revenue and in the thirteen months that they were in effect the net revenue of the Post Office increased by $290,000.

GENERAL POST OFFICE, March 21, 1815.

SIR,

AN office has been made to the owners of the several steam boats to contract for carrying the mail by their boats, and to deliver and receive the mails at a certain wharf at the several landings. There has not yet been time to receive an answer; but presuming that they will contract, and agree to deliver the mail at a wharf convenient to your office, it appeared proper to advise you of the project, that you may have the mail carried to and from the wharf, provided it can be done at a reasonable price, of which you will please to advise me. Letters conveyed in this way are to be rated with postage in the same manner as those conveyed by land, excepting that no one is to be charged with more than quadruple postage, unless they contain more than four distinct letters.

By an act passed at the last session of Congress, published in the National Intelligencer of the 7th instant, every master of a vessel is required to deliver all letters which he carries, into the post-office of the place to which they are addressed, if he stops there, under a penalty of thirty dollars. It will be necessary for you to endeavor to prevent and to prosecute for any infractions of this act.

The masters of steam boats and other vessels, who do not carry the mail by contract, are entitled to receive two cents for each letter and packet which they deliver to a post-master: these letters and packets are chargeable with a postage of nine cents.

Yours, respectfully,

R. Meigs

APRIL 1816 RESTORED RATES

By an act of Congress, passed February 1, 1816 the War Surcharge Rates were repealed. The postage rates of March, 1799 were restored. During the repeal hearing a firm policy to encourage communication was established. This policy continued to be a cornerstone for postal expansion during the 19th century.
